A New Name, a Longer Reach

Dear Friends of Princeton AlumniCorps:

Our organization changed its name in 2010 but our mission remains the same: to engage Princeton alumni and others in initiatives that serve the public interest. We did this for two decades as Princeton Project 55, starting out as middle-aged college classmates who recruited students and graduates to work for nonprofit organizations. We've also done it for the past decade through The Alumni Network, encouraging and supporting similar projects at Princeton and at other colleges around the country.

Many of you joined us in celebrating these pioneering initiatives at a highly successful 20th Anniversary Gala in Princeton last May. Their good work continues. Our original name survives in the Princeton Project 55 Fellowship Program, which this year has 51 recent graduates working with 40 partner organizations in seven U.S. cities. This new class of fellows joins a growing cadre of more than 1,250 alumni of the PP55 program. The Alumni Network also continues to flourish; all told, its affiliates placed more than 550 interns and fellows this year.

Our new name goes hand in hand with a renewed commitment to develop and implement programs that are designed for, and driven by, alumni of all ages. To that end, we launched the Community Volunteers Program, piloting this year in Trenton, NJ, and Washington, DC. This new initiative connects Princeton alumni from the '60s, '70s, and '80s with nonprofit organizations in need of experienced professional help.

All of this is possible because of your support and the hard work of our many volunteers, staff, and Board members, who ensure that our programs and impact continue to grow. As we look to the future, we echo the sentiments of Board Member Kathy Miller '77, who so aptly said at our 20th Anniversary Gala: "For me, this organization has been an opportunity to meet, work with, and learn from extraordinary alumni of all generations, whose shared effort improves people's lives and improves our society through service to others. Our first 20 years have been phenomenal. In the next 20 years, with your help, we will lead Princeton AlumniCorps to be a diverse community of alumni, working together to envision and create change through civic leadership."

Sincerely,

Princeton AlumniCorps by the Numbers

Since our founding, Princeton AlumniCorps has engaged volunteers from 51 Princeton graduating classes and attracted donors from 58.

A solid majority of PP55 alumni responding to a recent survey continue to be involved in the nonprofit sector:

56% currently work in the public interest.

49% serve nonprofit organizations as board members or volunteers.

72% say that their PP55 experience directly impacted their career path.

90% agree that Princeton AlumniCorps prepares fellows for civic leadership in the nation's service.

The PP55 program has placed more than 1,250 students and recent graduates in internships and fellowships at nearly 500 partner organizations.

Our outreach effort, The Alumni Network, has helped college students and alumni around the country organize more than 30 initiatives inspired by the PP55 example.

The Princeton Project 55 Fellowship Program

“My experience with BELL was so incredibly significant that I stayed there for four years, and I am committed to going back into a nonprofit when I graduate from business school. PP55 opened a door for me that I would not have had access to on my own, and set me on my lifelong path to public service and nonprofit management.”

The Project 55 Fellowship Program provides opportunities for young alumni to develop a lifelong commitment to public service and prepare for effective civic leadership. Since its inception in 1989, it has placed more than 1,250 Princeton graduates in summer internships and year-long fellowships at more than 500 public interest organizations across the country.

Fellows gain professional experience in such fields as education, employment, community development, and health through paid fellowships. They join a community of alumni and organizations dedicated to the common good and enjoy access to supportive mentors and unique professional development opportunities.

Participating organizations benefit from our work in recruiting, screening, and supporting fellows. Partner organizations gain access to bright, motivated talent for a minimal stipend. These organizations address critical social problems and are asked to provide fellows with significant responsibility plus excellent supervision and mentoring.

In 2010-11, 51 Project 55 Fellows are serving the public interest at 40 organizations in Boston, Chicago, Connecticut, New York City, Philadelphia, the Bay Area, and Washington, DC. More than 60 organizations and 130 recent graduates have applied to participate in the 2011-12 program. In February 2010, John Fish '55, a founder of the PP55 Program, introduced Maria Orozco '04 as the new PP55 Program Leader.

How it Works

- Princeton AlumniCorps staff and alumni volunteers screen fellowship applicants, match them with partner organizations, and provide mentoring and professional development.
- Nonprofit organizations take on energetic and talented Princeton graduates to work for a year as PP55 fellows on modest salaries.
- Fellows gain professional experience that deepens their understanding of and commitment to addressing pressing social issues — and may set them on a lifetime career path.

Why It Matters

According to a survey of 2009-10 fellows:

- 100% agreed that their fellowship was a worthy way to spend the year, and would recommend the program to other Princeton students and alumni.
- 90% indicated that their knowledge of and engagement with the nonprofit sector increased.
- 93% felt that they benefitted from the support of alumni volunteers and mentors.
- 39% continue to work in the nonprofit sector, and 42% are attending graduate school.

Community Volunteers

"I have been really excited to learn about and become more involved in Princeton AlumniCorps' expanded mission over the past months. The launch of the Community Volunteers program has opened my eyes to board service opportunities that I am now exploring. Princeton AlumniCorps is helping me fulfill a long-term dream of active involvement in nonprofit organizations."

Kef Kasdin '85, Program Leader, Community Volunteers

Dick Walker '73 leads an activity at a board networking night in Washington, DC, in November 2010

In May 2010, the Board of Directors approved the launch of Community Volunteers, a new initiative to connect alumni from the classes of the '60s, '70s and '80s with innovative volunteer opportunities in the nonprofit sector. Community Volunteers launched in September and is piloting this year in Trenton, NJ, and Washington, DC.

Too often, nonprofits can't fully leverage their potential for positive impact in their communities because they lack internal capacity. Yet in these same communities there are many skilled professionals who are interested in volunteering their skills but haven't found meaningful opportunities to do so. The goal of the Community Volunteers Program is to connect the talents, experience and passion of Princeton alumni to local nonprofits in need of skilled volunteer support.

During this pilot year in Trenton, Community Volunteers is organizing pro bono working groups of alumni to assist nonprofit organizations with substantive short-term projects. Initial project opportunities have been identified and will be undertaken in coming months.

In the Washington area, Community Volunteers is working to equip Princeton alumni for effective service on nonprofit boards. Since September, we have held a panel on board service and a board networking night to connect alumni with nonprofit organizations, and board training sessions are planned for the spring of 2011.

To learn more and stay up to date on the latest news, visit www.alumnicorps.org.

"Community Volunteers is 'chapter two' for Princeton AlumniCorps, initiated to engage alumni from the '60s, '70s, and '80s to bring their resources and experiences to share with nonprofits. It is in keeping with the mission and the spirit of an organization now in its 21st year. We honor the founders and, as stewards of their mission, continue to grow."

Although Project 55 was initially focused on Princetonians, before long it was sharing its growing expertise not only with other Princeton organizations, but also with other institutions' alumni who wanted to start similar projects of their own.

In 1999 we established The Alumni Network (TAN), then a nine-member consortium of alumni-driven public interest organizations at Princeton and in other cities. Since then, alumni, students, and administrators at more than 100 colleges and universities have contacted TAN about starting their own initiatives.

Today, TAN affiliates include more than 30 public interest programs at colleges and universities across the country, including some working abroad. Many affiliates place fellows and interns at innovative organizations working toward systemic change, while others run mentorship or community outreach programs.

Taken together, TAN affiliates have placed more than 7,000 interns and fellows since the Network's inception. In 2010-11, 557 undergraduates and recent graduates were placed at public interest organizations in the U.S. and around the world. In many cities, TAN affiliates host joint seminars and social gatherings to connect young alumni with an extensive nonprofit community.

This year the Adelphi Community Fellows Program joined The Alumni Network and placed 18 undergraduates in internships.

Celebrating 20 Productive Years

In 2010 Princeton Project 55 changed its name to Princeton AlumniCorps and marked its 20th anniversary. Alumni and friends gathered in Boston, Chicago, and New York, with celebrations culminating in a gala attended by over 350 guests in Princeton. The gala raised more than $116,000 to make up for decreases in funding from other sources suffered in 2009-10. Many thanks to our many active volunteers and supporters for making our 20th anniversary events a success!

Our Financials

July 1, 2009, through June 30, 2010

Despite the tough economic climate, Princeton AlumniCorps had a successful financial year in 2009-10, thanks to generous support from more than 550 individuals, foundations, and corporations — a record for the organization (see following pages). Operating expenses totaled $511,436. Income from all sources came to $654,002— including in-kind services from volunteers and a one-time-only infusion of $116,872 from our 20th anniversary gala.

Providing for the Future

Looking forward, Princeton AlumniCorps has been making a strategic effort to increase support from alumni and individuals of all generations. Since our founding 21 years ago by members of the Class of 1955, we have engaged donors from 58 different Princeton classes. More than 130 donors made a first-time gift to the organization in 2009-10.

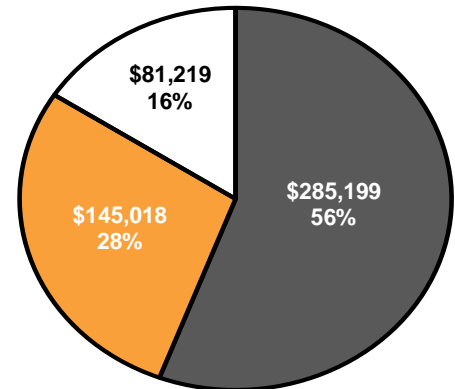

Princeton AlumniCorps has also established an endowment to ensure the sustainability of the organization. As of June 30, 2010, total endowment funds came to just over $821,000, the earnings of which are being reinvested in their entirety to build for future financial needs.

The Keystone Society, whose members have included Princeton AlumniCorps in their estate plans, is critical to assuring our continuing legacy. If you are interested in learning more or joining the Keystone Society, please contact Jim Gregoire '69 at gregadv@yahoo.com.

“It is an exceptional accomplishment that so much has been achieved by an agency which is volunteer-driven as opposed to staff-driven. The extensive use of volunteers has brought satisfaction to those involved and produced enormous results with comparatively small financial resources.”

Get Involved

Princeton AlumniCorps is a volunteer-driven organization. Every year, nearly 200 people contribute their time and expertise – providing oversight for the organization as Board and committee members, hosting events, running programs locally, and mentoring fellows. Volunteers are absolutely crucial to our success in carrying out the Princeton AlumniCorps mission: engaging alumni in the public interest. Please tell us if you want to know more about volunteer opportunities in your area.
